The World Is My Country, the riveting story of World Citizen #1 Garry Davis, will have its very first television screening on Twin Cities Public TV -- one broadcast only, so don't miss it!

This is the film that opened to a standing ovation at the Minneapolis/St. Paul International Film Festival!

It's the dramatic story of World Citizen #1 Garry Davis -- whose gutsy actions helped spark a movement which helped pave the way for the unanimous passage of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights on December 10, 1948. This special screening celebrates the anniversary of that historic event.

"Garry was like the Greta Thunberg of his time," said director Arthur Kanegis, "capturing the public's attention with his bold warning of the dangers we face, and his compelling call to action. Take a look at this brief clip..."

"We're going to give the first people who sign up on our website a free online screening and also a Q & A with the director -- so they'll get excited, tell their friends to tune-in, and create a social media buzz" added Melanie Bennett, Associate Producer, "If a lot of people tune-in, that'll help get PBS stations around the country to show it!"

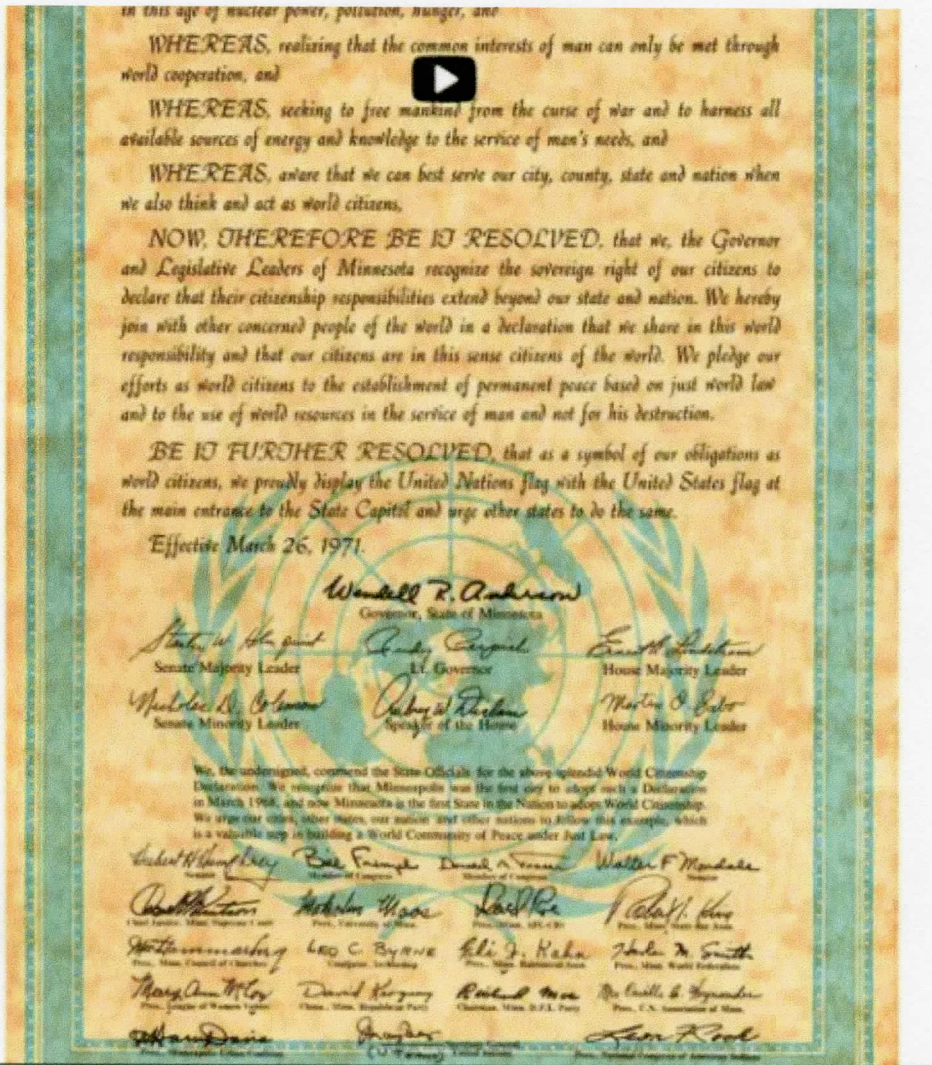

Sign up now at TheWorldIsMyCountry.com and you'll receive free:

1. A private password and link to watch the special hour-long preview -- good only November 20-28th.
2. A chance to Zoom in to the live Q & A with the director immediately following the show.
3. An invitation to come to the CGS viewing party - to watch "The World Is My Country" together and to meet our special guests at the Q & A!

Space is limited - so sign up now to get your spot -- and receive the time and location for the live event!

"Minnesotans have been leaders not only in warning of the danger of extinction, but also in promoting Global Solutions that can create a Workable World for everyone!" Kanegis said, showing this clip as an example:
